Accelerating the shift to low carbon vehicles and fuels

“This is an urgent and sizeable challenge, but it can be addressed cost effectively with strong action now. Even in the short term, we can achieve significant reductions in CO₂ emissions through the use of technologies that are already available, and by making smart choices, as individuals, about what, when and how to drive.”

LowCVP Fifth Annual Conference

23 July 2008, ExCeL London

The LowCVP Fifth Annual Conference

Delegates attending the LowCVP's fifth annual conference at ExCeL London at the opening of the London Motor Show, will find out about:

- The latest international, national and local policy developments from leading speakers, including the latest on the EU's 'Cars and CO₂' regulation
- The outcomes from the 'Gallagher Review' of the indirect effects of biofuels
- What Prof. Julia King thinks of the Government's response to the 'King Review' of low carbon cars
- The results of the latest research into the most promising and cost-effective options for cutting carbon from road transport
- What drives public attitudes and whether a 'greener' advertising protocol may help
- The 'fuel economy paradox'
- The DfT's 'Act on CO₂' campaign from the inside
- Join the debate ...

The BIG Debate

Join the BBC 'Question Time' style debate with leading representatives of the Government and the motor and fuels industries, Green Party Mayoral candidate Sian Berry and Professor Julia King.

Plus an opportunity to visit the British International Motor Show

All delegates at the LowCVP Conference will enjoy a complementary VIP pass to the Motor Show which will include the 'Greener Driving Pavilion' as well as a special display of electric vehicles. The Motor Show remains open until 9pm so there will be plenty of time for a visit after the LowCVP reception ends at around 6pm.

The opportunity to join a private reception in the 'Greener Driving Pavilion' – an environment-themed area of the Motor Show – before spending the evening in the Show itself (see opposite).

“Reducing CO₂ emissions from road transport requires action from everyone. Government has to create the context and provide the leadership to allocate responsibilities amongst vehicle manufacturers, fuel

Professor Julia King

The Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership is an action and advisory group, established in January 2003, to help accelerate the shift to low carbon vehicles and fuels in the UK. The LowCVP is a partnership which includes representatives of over 280 organisations. The membership includes most leading automotive and fuel companies, government, academia, environmental organisations, road user groups and other stakeholders.

Who should attend?

The LowCVP annual conference will be of interest to:

- motor and fuel company managers and strategists;
- international, national, regional and local government policy makers;
- university, 'think-tank' and other academic representatives;
- transport planners
- new technology suppliers, transport operators and road user groups;
- energy, transport and environmental consultants;
- energy, motor and other trade organisations;
- other LowCVP 'stakeholders'.

Why attend?

Learn the answers to key questions:

- What policies are coming forward at international, national and local levels to cut road transport carbon emissions and how will they impact on business?
- What is the future for biofuels? Can they do more good than harm?
- With high fuel prices and more evidence of climate change, are public attitudes changing towards efficient, low carbon cars?
- Is a protocol on 'greener' advertising a realistic aim?
- How widespread is the use of the new car fuel economy label? Is it having an impact?
- Which of the policy recommendations of the King Review will be pursued?
- What has the LowCVP done to hasten the low carbon shift, plus plans for the future?

"The debate on climate change has shifted from whether we need to act to how much we need to do by when, and the economic implications of doing so."

Rt Hon Ruth Kelly MP
Secretary of State for Transport

The 'Greener Driving Pavilion' at the London Motor Show

The LowCVP's annual conference – which takes place in a room overlooking the London Motor Show – will provide a forum for the discussion of the current key policy issues in the promotion of low carbon road transport. Following the conference, delegates will have the chance to enjoy a private reception within the 'Greener Driving Pavilion', a special environmentally-themed area within the Motor Show.

This is the first time that a dedicated area focusing on environmental issues has been introduced to the British Motor Show. The exhibit will showcase the latest carbon reduction technologies for cars as well as the ways in which individuals can make better transport choices and act to cut their carbon 'footprints'.

After the reception, sponsored by Shell, LowCVP conference delegates will be free to visit the rest of the Motor Show which remains open until 9pm.

Coordinate efforts in an international companies and consumers."

"The RFA is determined to ensure the indirect effects of biofuels on land use change and food insecurity are better understood and risks factored into policy making; this review will help us to do just that."

Professor Ed Gallagher on the launch of the Government's review into the indirect effects of biofuels
